Under the current Norwegian leadership and chair, the Council of the Baltic Sea States, Children at Risk Expert Group has undertaken a comprehensive mapping of national child protection systems and good/promising practices in the Baltic Sea Region.

Looking at child protection systems in seven countries in the Baltic Sea Region, the mapping has identified good practice and core elements of inclusive, sustainable, and resilient national child protection systems, that provide a continuum of protection, including in times of crisis. The mapping also made note of good cross-border practice that contributes to mutual trust and cross-border collaboration between national child protection systems.

The result of this mapping will be presented at the conference providing opportunities for reflections and discussions on what constitutes collective understanding, collaboration and mutual trust among child protection systems and actors in the region.

The conference is arranged by The Norwegian Directorate for Children, Youth and Family Affairs and moderated by Olivia Lind Haldorsson, Head of the Children at Risk Unit CBSS Secretariat.
